

Animal Tales

In the loud, sunny jungle a little rabbit with pointy ears, was wandering around. He loved exploring and solving mysteries. Suddenly, his eye caught a pile of dirt. As curious as a cat, he crept over to the dirt. He felt the ground getting softer. In the distance, he saw eyes peering at him from behind a bush. He walked forwards to have a look and then he slipped.

After a while, the rabbit realised that he had fallen into a hole! All of a sudden he heard a giggle.

“HELP! HELP!” the little rabbit cried.

“Never!” a voice replied.

“Let him go Cheetah,” said Mrs Flamingo in an angry voice. Rhino, Baby Flamingo, Mrs Flamingo and Mr Flamingo were there to save the poor rabbit.

“There’s no reason to lose your head, we will get him out of there.” Rhino said calmly.

In the Flamingo’s habitat, they all came up with an extraordinary plan.

“Rhino, you distract Cheetah. Mr Flamingo, you have to wait for Rhino’s signal.

Then, Baby Flamingo and I will hide behind a bush.” Said Mrs Flamingo in a serious voice.

The next day, everyone went down to the hole Rabbit was stuck in.

“Are you ready Mr Flamingo?” Rhino asked.

“YES! NO! I DON’T KNOW!” Mr Flamingo was loud and panicky. After calming him down, Mrs Flamingo and Baby Flamingo hid behind a bush. Rhino distracted Cheetah by dancing and Mr Flamingo waited for Rhino’s signal. Then Rhino gave it. All of a sudden, a net was over Cheetah.

“Say you promise not to hurt one of us again,” said Mrs Flamingo, whilst pulling Rabbit out.

“I promise hurt or kill anyone ever again,” Cheetah said.

In the evening, they were all celebrating happily at the Flamingo’s. Rhino showed off his dance moves and Mr Flamingo made his homemade chocolate cake. Everybody was happy, but while they were celebrating Cheetah was planning her revenge.

“They think they can stop me. Now that I have a partner they have no, I repeat NO chance,” she said with a grin.

By Amnah Rizvan. Hamilton