Letter to persuade Bertie's father to keep the white lion

Dear father,

I am writing to you because I would like to keep the magnificent, white lion.

Imagine the white lion without a mother, where he couldn't hunt, where he'll die: you didn't let him stay. As you know, the lion's mother has died. His mother has died: he doesn't know how to look after himself.

If the white lion was in the wild, if he'd starve, if he died, then it'll be your fault. Some people like you father don't like lions; others like me do. ^{Magnificent} ~~White~~, funny ~~white~~ lion with fur as white as snow. The white lion, who is my friend, could be an excellent companion.

~~Eventhough~~ ~~Eventhough~~ the white lion is a predator, ~~so~~ he's not dangerous. If I look after the white lion I am sure his mother would be happy with me.

I know you think it's a bad idea: messy, unsafe

I hope you understand my reasons for keeping the white lion.
Yours Bertie.
